SUPREME COURT OF HAWAII
ALIIOLANI HALE
HONOLULU

CHAMBERS OF
WILLIAM S. RICHARDSON
CHIEF JUSTICE

November 4, 1981

Professor A. Jerome Dupont
Librarian
University of Hawaii
School of Law
1400 Lower Campus Road
Honolulu, HI 96822

Dear Professor Dupont:

I am pleased to send you the computer indexes to court records produced in our research project, "The Social Role of the Courts in the Hawaiian Monarchy."

These indexes are for all four circuits from ca. 1845 through 1892. There are three separate indexes: civil, criminal and divorce. Each index has a cover sheet indicating the variables listed and a key to codes used. All of the original records indexed are located in the State Archives. Copies of these indexes will be located at the Hawaii State Archives, the Supreme Court Library, the Law School Library and at the Circuit Courts.

Probate cases were only sampled in the First, Third and Fourth (fifth) Circuits, so they have not been indexed.

It is our hope that these indexes will help generate research interest in these court records.

Aloha pumehana,

REPORT OF ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Institution:	State of Hawaii Judiciary
Project Director:	Jane L. Silverman
Project Title:	The Social Role of the Courts in the Hawaiian Monarchy
Grant Number:	RS-0110-80-1416
Grant Period:	Fifteen months
Grant Amount:	$75,000
Final Report Date:	October 27, 1981

I. Background:

The purpose of this project was to continue to develop historical research material on the social role of the courts in the Hawaiian Monarchy period that started in first year NEH grant #RS-0040-79-0573. During this grant, the development of a new social and economic order in Hawaii in the last half of the nineteenth century was looked at in two areas. The first area was the courts' involvement in the creation and implementation of policies to prevent the Hawaiian race from dying out by reconstituting families to conform to New England cultural norms, as a nuclear family, each on its own piece of land. Second was the courts' promotion and response to the growth of a modern capitalistic economy in which haole (white foreigner) and later Chinese entrepreneurs could pursue economic gain. Our primary research resource was the 21,000 Circuit and Supreme Court case files and related administrative files in the Hawaii State Archives.

As research progressed, we planned to share information on our project, the material being investigated and some of our results with the public, including the national American Bar Association Convention which met in Honolulu in 1980.

It was also our purpose to work towards development of a small museum in Ali'iolani Hale, the historic supreme court building, that could on a continuing basis, present some of the research results growing out of these projects. Research will also be presented in an article on law and the Hawaiian family and two on law and the Hawaiian economy.

Our project work continued to be guided by an advisory committee chaired by Chief Justice William S. Richardson with the following membership: Agnes Conrad, State Archivist; Harry V. Ball, Professor of Sociology, University of Hawaii; James Mak, Professor of Economics, University of Hawaii; A. Jerome Dupont, Librarian, Law School Library, University of Hawaii; Masaji Marumoto, Associate Justice (retired), Supreme Court; C. Michael Hare, lecturer on Hawaiian rights, Law School, University of Hawaii, and Abraham Piianaia, Director, Hawaiian Studies Program, University of Hawaii.

II. Project Activities:

The major effort has been in-depth coding for computer based storage and retrieval, of cases selected from the broader information categories coded during the first year. The same procedure used in the first year was followed. Coding forms were developed after a review of a sample of cases. University students were trained to code the cases, Hawaiian language students doing the cases in that language.

Once coded, all cases were reviewed by the project director or research associate for internal consistency.

In the area focusing on the Hawaiian family three types of cases were coded in depth: Criminal adultery cases, family related issues in the divorce cases and land ejectment cases.

Adultery cases: One of the primary efforts on the legal system was the repression of what western law based on Biblical interpretations and adopted into Hawaiian law, considered illicit sex. Prosecutions for adultery were a major part of the criminal calendar in the district courts. All 658 cases appealed to the Circuit Courts in all circuits were coded for complainants, manner of arrest, lines of evidence and degrees of severity of punishment. (See attached coding form.)

Family Issues in Divorce cases: The 600 divorce cases coded in the first year which had shown information on child custody, child support, alimony and property settlement and those in which divorces were not granted or discontinued by the courts were selected for further coding. Separate questions were devised for each of these issues, including number of children, who was granted custody and amounts of child support, alimony and property settlement. Although research is centering on the Hawaiian family, information on all ethnic groups was recorded to discover patterns of variations. (See attached coding form.)

Ejectment cases: One of the primary justifications for the land revolution which broke up the King's feudal control of land and allowed the commoners to hold land in fee, was that it would support the formation of nuclear families. Civil suits which involved Hawaiian parties in ejectment were coded, including the island the land was located on, the basis of the claim, the type of land involved, whether the dispute was intra-family, and citations in the decisions to the law of various jurisdictions. One-third of the cases on Oahu and all of the small number of cases in the other circuits were coded for a total of 280. (See attached coding form.)

Governors' Divorce cases: From 1829 to 1853 island Governors were given authority to grant divorces. After 1847 they held this power concurrently with the Chief Justice sitting at Chambers. These cases were of interest because the public complained of the casual basis on which the Governors granted divorces. Two hundred thirty-nine Governors' divorce cases were collected from Interior Department administrative files, the Governors' administrative correspondence, a Maui Governor's minutebook (translated from Hawaiian by this project) and other sources. They were coded on the same forms used to code court divorce cases in the first year.

Notes were taken on other case files relating to family issues. These included 159 requests to the island Governors for permission to remarry after a divorce, 63 polygamy and bigamy cases, 19 desertion cases and nine incest cases.

In the area focusing on law and economic change two types of cases, equity and bankruptcy were coded and files of information on business licenses and partnerhships and corporations from other sources were entered into computer files.

Bankruptcy cases: Detailed coding was done on the 315 bankruptcy cases. Bankruptcy became of interest for two reasons: first because it is an intrinsically interesting legal process, which, by comparison, did not exist in the United States for most of the nineteenth century, and, second, because the case documents contain a great deal of revealing material on the growth of the commercial community, particularly the pattern of credit relationships among businessmen of different ethnicities.

For each bankruptcy case, information was coded on the name and amount owed each creditor at the time of the bankruptcy, the ethnicity of creditors, their location (foreign or domestic), the ethnicity of the bankrupt, his type and location of business, total debt owed (both secured and unsecured), etc.

Equity cases: The 550 equity cases for which coding was not completed in the first year, were coded using a coding form slightly modified from that used for the Civil cases. Although the subject matter of these equity cases is quite similar to civil law suits, the remedy requested--injunction, specific performance, voiding of deeds--is of course quite different.

Business licenses: One unexpected major source of information on the developing commercial economy are the business license records kept by the Hawaiian government. The government issued at various times during the monarchy period forty-six different types of licenses for commercial activity ranging from wholesale store licenses to "hawking and peddling." Approximately 40,000 of these licenses were issued between 1854 when the government began systematically keeping records to 1893, the end of the period covered by this project. A fifty percent sample of these licenses was recorded by coding every license issued in even numbered years (20,000). The name of the licensee was recorded, his or her ethnicity, the type of license, location by island and cost of the license.

Partnerships and Corporations: Records were also found on partnerships and corporations that existed during the monarchy. One hundred thirty-five business corporations were chartered by the Hawaiian government in that period. The organizing founders of these corporations were recorded for the purpose of revealing who were the dominant actors in the economy. Also recorded were the names of the partners of all five hundred and fifty partnerships recorded at the Bureau of Conveyances. These data reveal the names of many of the companies that appear in the bankruptcy cases, and also indicate who was involved in the business.

Probate cases: During the first part of the second year, coding was continued to complete the Second Circuit Hawaiian language probate cases which had not been finished in the first year.

Research notes were taken and broad background reading was done by the project director in the area of the family and by the research associate in the area of the economy.

On the family, notes were taken in the Interior Department files and in the correspondence of the island governors up through the 1860s. Reading was done in anthropological studies on the Polynesian family and sexual mores, including Herbert I. Hogbin, Margaret Mead and Bengt Danielson. Reading was also done in methodological approaches to statistical analysis in historical materials relating to the family in articles by Tamara Haveren and books by Peter Laslett. Another area of research was the concept of the need for privacy in living space as a necessary precondition for the development of the nuclear family as discussed in the work of Pierre Donzelot and David Flaherty.

In the area of law and economic change data was collected and recorded from several sources. One of the most revealing sources of the use of law to promote economic development was the Hawaiian statutes. All of the statutes passed by the Hawaiian government during the monarchy were read and notes taken on those that pertained to the economy. Files and reports of the Department of the Interior were also read and relevant information noted. Early Supreme Court decisions were read to determine the orientation of the chief judicial officers to commercial development.

Translation of documents and correspondence from Hawaiian to English was done by two Hawaiian translators, Esther Mookini, a university trained translator and Evaline Kanahele, a native speaker. The first Supreme Court Minutebook, 1844-48, was completed, pages 103 through 133. Working with the project director, rough translations of the complete minutebook were gone over for their meaning in English and legal and procedural questions were cleared up when possible.

Forty-four pieces of correspondence, court cases and documents in the First Circuit "Courts Miscellaneous" files were translated covering the period 1850 to 1870. In the Second Circuit "Correspondence" files twenty-eight letters and documents were translated. Ten cases of deserting husbands and wives were translated from the Third Circuit and a volunteer made precis of documents in Japanese relating to a deserting wife in Hilo in 1893. A Minutebook of "Divorce Records of the Governor of Maui, Lahaina, Maui, July 14, 1851" [1851-1856] of eighty-five pages was also translated. Two petitions to the legislature to remove judges and several adultery cases in the district court of Honolulu were translated as well as a series of articles on adultery in the Hawaiian language newspaper Ka Nonanona in 1841 and several comments in the Hawaiian language newspaper Kumu Hawaii on the same subject in 1834 and 1836. University of Hawaii students of Hawaiian language coded probate, family issues in divorce, adultery and ejectment cases in that language.

An index to items and articles relating to the courts in the English language newspapers published in Honolulu from 1840 through 1859 when the court system was being developed, was completed by the research assistant.

Special programs were developed to share information from our project with the delegates to the American Bar Association convention which was held in Honolulu. A small pictorial booklet on the historical development of Hawaii's judiciary with an introduction by the Chief Justice was written, designed and published. "A Pictorial Glimpse of Bench & Bar in the Hawaiian Monarchy" was distributed to ABA members who attended receptions at Ali'iolani Hale (Judiciary Building) or who came on sightseeing visits. General distribution to delegates was not allowed by the ABA as the booklet was not completed in time to go through their required screening process.

The project coordinated a panel of speakers on the protection of individual rights in Hawaii for the ABA Individual Rights and Responsibilities Section on August 2. Dr. Harry Ball, a member of our advisory committee, chaired the presentation and spoke on "Administration of Criminal Justice in the 1850s"; project legal consultant Jerrold K. Guben spoke on "Language as a Discriminatory Tool in Employment"; Peter Nelligan, research associate on the project, spoke on "19th Century Bankruptcy Law in Hawaii" and project director Jane Silverman discussed "Remarriage Restraints in 19th Century Hawaiian Divorce." Other speakers on the panel were Neal Milner, University Political Science Department, on "Emergence of Individual Rights in Mental Illness"; Judith Gething, American Studies Department, "Impact of Western Law on the Status of Hawaiian Women"; Carole Iwamoto, graduate student in Sociology, on "Masters and Servants Law in 19th Century Hawaii," and Laureen Asato, graduate student in Sociology, "Coverture and the Rights of Women in 19th Century Hawaii."

The Chief Justice invited the Supreme Court, the Judicial Council, the project advisory committee, the Trustees of the Office of Hawaiian Affairs, persons who had been involved with the project and legislative leaders to hear a progress report on the project on May 28. About eighty-five people gathered in the Supreme Court courtroom to hear a report by the project director entitled "A Glimpse of Less Visible Actors," by the research associate Peter Nelligan on "The Role of the Hawaiian Government in Economic Change During the 19th Century," and by project legal advisor Jerrold K. Guben on "Competition and Regulation in the Early Hawaiian Economy." (Copies of the program are attached. A video-tape of the speeches was recorded the following week.)

A talk was given by research associated Nelligan to a graduate seminar in Hawaiian history on methodological aspects of working with a large group of original records. Mr. Nelligan also spoke on a panel on "New Uses for Old Sources" to a public two-day historic preservation meeting sponsored by the Hawaii Multi-Cultural Center and to a luncheon meeting of the Hawaii chapter, American Statistical Association. The project director gave a talk to a group of twenty-five docents at the Grove Farm sugar plantation museum on the kinds of information about the Hawaiian family coming out of court records. She also spoke to the Hawaii Museums Association meeting on Kauai on the Judiciary's planning process for developing a new museum.

The project director rewrote a grant application to the Museums and Historical Organizations program of the National Endowment for the Humanities for a museum planning grant for the Judiciary. The project has been funded.

Work on papers to be published is in progress. The project director gave an oral presentation to an informal legal history seminar of the material from the first year on development of the organizational structure of the courts. The paper was rewritten based on comments from the group.

Nelligan has two major papers in progress. Legal consultant Jerrold Guben and Nelligan are working on the paper which will present an overview of the role of law in promoting economic change. An outline is being developed.

Consultant Bliss Cartwright came to Honolulu in August to make plans for his article to be authored with Nelligan on the development of the structure of the commercial community. An outline was developed for that paper and methodological approaches to analysis of the commercial community network analysis were planned.

Circuit court minutebooks in English were indexed by the clerk-typist so that minutes that could be readily correlated with case files could be brought together in the computer indexes. These minutebook indexes were also given to the State Archives to be filed with the minutebooks.

III. Results:

This project has, over a two-year period, coded information on two hundred and thirty-two variables in 21,058 Circuit and Supreme Court cases of the Hawaiian monarchy period (See attached chart). This is a reservoir of research information which will provide material for the papers to be done for this project as well as analysis by researchers from several subject disciplines in the future.

This project has made information in these Circuit and Supreme Court cases accessible to the public by printing indexes and distributing them to the State Archives, Supreme Court and University Law School libraries and to the Circuit Courts.

This project has shared preliminary research results through speeches, publications, seminars and informally with other researchers. This material is unique in Hawaiian historical research as it is a rich collection of information on the daily activities of ordinary people in their personal and business interactions and reveals patterns of participation and exclusion of Hawaii's ethnic groups: Hawaiians, Caucasians, Chinese, South Sea Islanders, Portuguese and Japanese.

Dissemination of more detailed results and analysis will continue through publication of articles and through the development of a museum presentation at Ali'iolani Hale, the historic Supreme Court Building.

This project has developed a vocabulary of Hawaiian legal terms and several translators familiar with legal material.

This project has worked with the Archives and the University Law School Library to preserve legal records for future research.

The major result of research on the Hawaiian family is that it has opened up the study of the Hawaiian family in the 19th century based on contemporary documents reporting on a large number of specific, named individuals. The information from this study will revise the popular concept of the traditional Hawaiian family. Present day beliefs about the traditional Hawaiian family picture an ohana, a warm, caring, encompassing extended family supporting each other with understanding and shared material goods. Information from these cases does not fit the present day view of the past's cohesive extended family. Modern statistical research in the American and European family has replaced a former assumption of an extended family with a nuclear family. However, the major finding relating to the Hawaiian family was that the case records do not appear to support any specific pattern of family structure. Change and mobility seem to be the constant in Hawaiian family life in the 19th century.

Research on the Hawaiian family was diffused over a broad spectrum. The court cases which include information on family issues are diverse, ranging from divorce, criminal actions such as adultery, bigamy, polygamy, incest, probate cases and civil cases connected with family lands. The cases show short marriages, high geographical mobility within the islands, greater for women than for men, frequent extra-marital sex, often in a room with several other people present, and few living children of marriages. The extent to which the small number of living children contributed to the lack of permanence or stability in marital relationships will have to be looked at in the light of Hawaiian views of children and the extent to which they were transformed by Christian views in the 19th century. In the 1361 probate cases (a one-third sample) 565 (41.5%) of the decedents did not have surviving children and in an additional 240 (17.8%) whether there were living children or not was not documented. Of the decedents, 551 (40.4%) had living children at their death. Eighty-five percent of the decedents recorded as having living children had three or fewer children and of these 285 (54.2%) were single children.

All of the statistical material from the cases will need to be analyzed against census material to test its validity for the general population. The necessity of studying the statistical results in their historical context was vividly illustrated in looking at the law enforcement of criminal adultery cases. The high incidence of adultery arrests appears not to have been fostered by popular community concern, but by a mechanism built into the imposed legal system. The salaries of many of the constables were based on a percentage of the fines collected in court convictions. This was strong incentive to midnight vigilance and often inventiveness on the part of the constables. The extent of the Court's efforts to protect the accused from the self-interest of the constables then became a matter of interest in the cases.

The fact that men were often fined twice as much as women in adultery cases is surprising from a 19th century western cultural view where women in adultery were censured more severely than men. Possible interpretations will need to look at a double standard weighted in favor of greater sexual freedom for women than for men and also at the possibility of a pragmatic approach by the courts based on the routine that those unable to pay their fines worked at hard labor and during this period the labor of men was needed to build a modern network of roads throughout the islands.

Analysis for the first article to be done from this material on the family will be based on the theory that separating the interior of a house into private spaces was a necessary precondition for the growth of the nuclear family. Changes in the way interior space was divided in grass and other Hawaiian houses from the 1840s to 1893 will be looked at through testimony in the adultery cases concerning doors, furnishings and interior partitions. Information will also be developed on the extent to which the nuclear family existed through that period of time from the case files, census and church reports.

In studying the structure of the commercial community, Nelligan was able to reconstruct the participation and exclusion of three ethnic groups, Hawaiian, Chinese and Caucasian in economic activity.

A study of the bankruptcy cases was very revealing about the credit relationships among established haole (Caucasian) businessmen and the increasing number of Chinese entrepeneurs. About 45% of the bankrupts were Chinese and the data reveal that they were largely involved in small retail stores financed on book accounts by large Honolulu based, haole-owned wholesale houses. When the Chinese got behind in their payments they would sometimes be involuntarily put through bankruptcy and their remaining assets seized. The bankruptcy cases also reveal the almost complete exclusion of Hawaiians from entrepreneurial activity. They appear as bankrupts in less than 5% of the cases and infrequently appear as creditors. This finding along with our other data will provide major support for our theme that the emerging capitalist economy excluded Hawaiians from most business activities.

The bankruptcy cases constitute the data base for one of the two major papers in the law and economic change focus.

The 20,000 business licenses which were recorded on computer (a fifty percent sample) provide valuable information supplementary to the bankruptcy records. One can trace the business history of the bankrupts through these licenses and they also reveal marked patterns of ethnic differentiation in types of business. Haoles dominated the most complex and profitable of activities, e.g. wholesale stores and in the early period retail stores. Chinese move in quickly and eventually dominate the retail store area and appear strongly in several other types of business. The marginal relationship of Hawaiians is again documented by these data; they appear in the simplest and least profitable kinds of activities, e.g. renting of horses or rowing of boats in Honolulu harbor.

Partnerships and corporations information recorded from the Bureau of Conveyances reveals the names of many of the companies that appear in the bankruptcy cases and also indicate who was in the business. Interesting ethnic patterns exist; Chinese partnerships tend to be large (many partners) probably due to the shortage of capital available to this newly arrived immigrant group.

The link in the grant between research and museum planning has been an asset to the research work as it progressed, to the future planning for the museum and especially to the ability of the research project to impact on the Judiciary and the public's humanistic understanding of Hawaiian judicial history. As the research went on we made several sorties into public presentation of the material which strengthened both projects. We developed a preliminary exhibit story line on the history of Ali'iolani Hale (Judiciary Building) for the American Bar Association receptions. The exhibit was eight panels of historic photographs and architectural diagrams and sketches in a kiosk which sat directly under the skylight in the first floor rotunda. It remained in place for nearly a year and was seen by people waiting for court trials and drew in tourists who came from the Kamehameha statue to read the historic plaque by the door, looked in, saw the exhibit and came in. The pictorial booklet developed at the same time, sits on a desk in the rotunda and is available for visitors at no cost. Both these pictorial presentations helped the research project to develop a sense of the pictorial resources available, to work back and forth between the photographs and themes and to gain the additional information contained in the photographs.

Two experiences with taking visitors on tours of the building gave us an opportunity to define our presentation of the history of the Judiciary through the building. The first was an evening reception for about one hundred Judiciary volunteers in which the Chief Justice and the project director took a large group through the renovated second floor. At a walking tour of historic buildings sponsored by the Historic Hawaii Foundation about four hundred people were given a historical background by the project director and information on the renovation work by the Administrative Director of the Courts and were taken on a tour by several employees trained by the project director.

Through contacts relating to this project, the Judiciary invited the Hawaii Museums Association to hold part of its annual spring meeting in the Supreme Court courtroom and the Chief Justice hosted a reception for members. The project director did a small exhibit on the chief justices of the monarchy period for that reception which remains in the ante-room to the Supreme Court.

Information from this project revised the Judiciary's concept of its own history. All of its brochures have always referred to Chief Justice Lee who came from Massachusettes as the "first" chief justice. Research from this project has shown that Kamehameha III sat as chief justice of the highest appeal court for a dozen years before Lee. Based on that information, the Judiciary borrowed a portrait of Kamehameha III from the State Archives and hung it by the door to the Supreme Court. This is significant because prior to the present Chief Justice, the King was the only chief justice of Hawaiian ancestry. In the new printing of the Judiciary's brochure on the courts, the King's picture has been inserted in its historical place.

The mural being designed for the new District Court Building has drawn on information developed from the translation of the Supreme Court Minutebook, to depict the King and Kuhina Nui (Premier), a woman, sitting with the four associate justices to hear an appellate case in the large grass house on the Honolulu waterfront which served as one of the first courthouses. The Governor has named the District Court after the King, based on information developed in this research.

The Governor also named the new Circuit Court building in Honolulu after Kaahumanu, a woman, who served as Regent and Premier to the King when he was young and with him developed the first code of law and court functions. The program for the groundbreaking ceremonies carried historical information about her judicial role from research of this project.

'Aha'ilono, the Judiciary newsletter for employees which is also circulated to lawyers has printed articles on the work of the project, the text of talks given by the project director and research associate, as well as news about the new NEH grant awarded to the Judiciary for museum planning. This keeps the judicial community aware of the ongoing work of the project.

The general public became aware of the project through an article by a popular newspaper columnist Bob Krauss in the Honolulu Advertiser in June. His article, which tied in the present Chief Justice, an 1853 minutebook of his great grandfather's cases as Second Circuit Court Judge and some of the project's research results, received enthusiastic comment by the most listened-to morning disc jockey who encouraged everyone to read the article, every fifteen minutes that morning. (A copy of the news article is enclosed.)

Two gifts to the Judiciary came through museum contacts developed through this project. The first was the gift of two large models, one of the coral block courthouse built in 1852 and the other of the Honolulu waterfront of that period which shows the courthouse in place. These were gifts of Amfac Inc. who owned the courthouse building after the courts moved to Ali'iolani Hale. The other gift is two lifesize portraits of Abraham Lincoln and Ulysses S. Grant which were probably painted in the upstairs artist's studio in Ali'iolani Hale. These were a gift from the State Senate and will be hung in the corridors.

The valuable information on the details of daily life of the Hawaiians and their actions in the lower courts in the 19th century coming out of translations of court cases during this project induced the Judiciary to fund a pilot project to translate a sample of district court minutebooks. Mrs. Mookini who did translations during this project is working with students of Hawaiian language to translate the Honolulu District Court minutebooks of 1844 and 1845, the earliest of these minutebooks. Based on this work, the Judiciary will request the Legislature to fund the translation of a significant sample of minutebooks.

Federal court records of Hawaii in the Territorial period have come under the disposal schedule of the National Archives and Records Service. They are presently stored in a records center in California. In order to preserve them for future research, the Project principals and a member of the advisory committee met with Federal District Judge Samuel P. King to discuss their preservation. A plan was worked out with the University of Hawaii Law School librarian, who is also on the project advisory committee, to bring the disposed records back to Hawaii and add them to the collection at the law library.

State records from the Second Circuit Court which included thirty-four minute books of the monarchy period were taken out of the basement of the court and sent to the State Archives to become part of the available research collection of court records. The probate minutebooks of the Second and Fourth circuits were also deposited in the Archives and assisted the coders in working on the coding of probate cases.

An informal weekly seminar on legal history begun in the first year of the project continued with faculty and graduate students from the University and project personnel.

This project has contributed to the research of several other persons working in the University Department of Sociology on the history of law in Hawaii.

Ms. Carole Iwamoto has used our case codings to identify cases involving contract laborers in labor disputes for her PhD dissertation on labor contracting in Hawaii.

Ms. Laureen Asato has used our case codings, the business license data and the bankruptcy creditor information in her master's thesis on coverture and the legal status of women.

Ms. Joan Ikemoto has used our coding of criminal cases to identify murder cases for her research on the history of the insanity defense in Hawaii.

Dr. Harry Ball, Professor of Sociology has used our coding to identify opium prosecutions for his work on opium law.

IV. Status:

The Judiciary museum planning grant which grew out of this research work is now ongoing. Part of the commitment of that grant is to develop an implementation grant proposal for doing the work of setting up the museum. The grant proposal will be submitted as part of the completion report for the planning grant.

One important area of research which needs to be done to complete the basic research for the Role of the Courts in the Hawaiian Monarchy is a study of the district courts. In these lower, local courts Hawaiians presided as judges, served as lawyers and recorded the proceedings. It is likely that these courts would most reflect the continuation of traditional Hawaiian cultural patterns. This project has identified the records available and the Judiciary has undertaken a pilot project to translate them. If the Legislature funds further translation of a representative sample of these records, research and analysis should be done.

We will have these in law lib →

The other project that grows organically out of this one is the study of Federal district court records for the Territorial period in relation to adultery and bankruptcy. Because Hawaii was a Territory, adultery cases came under Federal jurisdiction and bankruptcy cases were controlled by Federal law. Through such a project it would be possible to trace the similarities and differences in the handling of two types of cases, one moral and the other economic, under two very different jurisdictions, the courts of the Hawaiian Kingdom and those of the United States Federal government.

V. Anticipated dissemination of results:

The article on the development of the structure of the Judiciary in the monarchy period coming out of the first year of research was submitted to the annual Hawaiian Journal of History. They have asked for revisions for their next journal for which the deadline is March, 1982.

For the second year of research two major papers are in progress on the law and economic change: one on the bankruptcy cases and what they reveal of the network of relationships in the economic community and the other a general overview of the role of law in promoting economic change. These articles will be submitted to either Law and Society Review or the Journal of Legal History sometime in 1982.

At the completion of the work on the museum planning grant in March, 1982, the project director will write the article on privacy as a precondition for the development of the Hawaiian nuclear family which will be submitted to the Hawaiian Journal of History.

The Judiciary is planning to ask the Legislature for funds to republish the "Pictorial Glimpse of Bench & Bar in the Hawaiian Monarchy."

VI. Additional Information:

This project is making a contribution to the methodological approach in the area of local history in Hawaii. It is the first project here to use computer capabilities with local history sources to record, store, sort and locate data with desired characteristics or which meet certain criteria. This is demonstrating a way of making use of existing data that has previously proved impenetrable. This process has given access to trends and patterns of daily life on the local level that might not be discernable through other research methods. This has attracted the interest of historians here.

On a broader scale, this project contributes to a growing knowledge among legal historians of the prospects and problems of coding legal cases for computer analysis and retrieval. Since project personnel have contacts with persons with similar interests, this knowledge will be shared informally and perhaps formally in the future. A special contribution of the bankruptcy study will be a methodology of analyzing networks of debtors and creditors. This will be an original contribution.

LAW (CIVIL) CASES INDEXES

THESE INDEXES WERE PRODUCED IN 1980-81 UNDER A GRANT FROM THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES TO THE STATE JUDICIARY FOR THE PROJECT "THE SOCIAL ROLE OF THE COURTS IN THE HAWAIIAN MONARCHY", JANE SILVERMAN-PROJECT DIRECTOR. AS PART OF THAT PROJECT EACH CIVIL CASE HANDLED BY THE CIRCUIT OR LOCAL CIRCUIT COURTS OF THE OUTER ISLANDS OR THE COURT OF OAHU, SUPERIOR COURT OF LAW & EQUITY, OR SUPREME COURT FOR OAHU, FOR WHICH THERE IS A RECORD, WAS EXAMINED AND CODED WITH RESPECT TO ITS BASIC CHARACTERISTICS LIKELY TO BE OF INTEREST TO RESEARCHERS. THESE INDEXES WERE PRODUCED USING THOSE DATA.

PRINTED IN THESE INDEXES ARE THE NAMES OF ALL THE PLAINTIFFS (UP TO SIX NAMES) AND DEFENDANTS (UP TO NINE NAMES) IN EACH CASE, THE CASE NUMBER, THE YEAR THE CASE STARTED IN THE COURTS. THE VOLUME AND PAGE OF ANY MINUTE BOOK ENTRIES ON THE CASE (SEE CODES BELOW), THE TYPE OF CASE AS LABELED BY THE COURT CLERK OR JUDGE (SEE CODES BELOW), WHETHER OR NOT THERE WAS A JURY IN THE CASE, AND THE VOLUME AND PAGE OF ANY PRINTED DECISIONS ON THE CASE IN HAWAII REPORTS.

DURING THE MONARCHY PERIOD THERE WERE FOUR JUDICIAL CIRCUITS: FIRST CIRCUIT (OAHU), SECOND CIRCUIT (MAUI, MOLOKAI, LANAI), THIRD CIRCUIT (HAWAII), AND FIFTH CIRCUIT (KAUAI, NIIHAU). THERE ARE TWO INDEXES FOR EACH CIRCUIT, ONE ALPHABETICAL BY NAME OF EACH PLAINTIFF IN EACH CASE (WITH ALL DEFENDANTS IN THE CASE LISTED), AND ONE ALPHABETICAL BY EACH DEFENDANT IN EACH CASE (WITH ALL PLAINTIFFS LISTED EACH TIME). THUS, IN ORDER TO GET A COMPLETE LIST OF PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS FOR A CASE, ONE WOULD LOOK AT ALL THE DEFENDANTS LISTED WITH ANY ONE OF THE PLAINTIFFS AND ALL THE PLAINTIFFS LISTED WITH ANY ONE OF THE DEFENDANTS. IN CERTAIN CASES THERE IS NO DEFENDANT (E.G. HABEAS CORPUS PETITIONS, BANKRUPTCIES, DISBARMENT OF ATTORNIES OR REMOVAL OF JUDGES, WRITS OF MANDAMUS). SUCH CASES ARE RECORDED AS "IN RE __________" IN THE LEGAL RECORDS. THIS PROJECT RECORDED THE PERSON'S NAME IN THE PLAINTIFF'S BLANK AND THEY WILL BE LISTED ALPHABETICALLY ALONG WITH THE OTHER PLAINTIFFS IN THE PLAINTIFFS INDEX. THEY ARE ALSO LISTED TOGETHER AT THE BEGINNING OF THE DEFENDANT'S LIST.

IT SHOULD BE RECOGNIZED THAT THESE INDEXES WERE TAKEN FROM HANDWRITTEN RECORDS IN WHICH THERE ARE NO DOUBT SOME MISSPELLINGS AND VARIATIONS IN THE SPELLING OF NAMES. THEREFORE THE INDEXES SHOULD BE USED WITH CAUTION.

THE CASE FILES OF THESE CASES AND THE MINUTE BOOKS ARE IN THE STATE ARCHIVES.
